From the British Chronicle.

To the PRINTER.

IT is a juſt obſervation of [illegible] that in proportion as every country is barbarous, it is addicted to inebriety. Were the people of England to be judged of by this ſtandard, it is much to be feared that our national character would be none of the moſt amiable. Notwithſtanding few people can lay down better rules for behaviour, or to make at leaſt, a decent appearance, than ourſelves, there are none more unaccountably prepoſſeſſed in their conduct. When we viſit at one another's houſes, and propoſe to paſs a few hours in an agreeable manner, how ſhort do we fall! Inſtead of endeavouring to enjoy what Mr. Pope finely calls

The feaſt of reaſon, and the flow of ſoul, we think every entertainment inſipid until reaſon is totally baniſhed out of company; and imagine, through ſome monſtrous depravity of imagination, that a ſocial emination of ſoul is never to be obtained but where politeneſs and propriety are quarterly ſacrificed, and the roar of under-bred exceſs circulates round the room, at the expence of both ſenſe and morals.

To the indelible diſgrace of our country, there is ſcarcely a vice or a folly of our neighbours but what we ſervilely copy, at the very moment we affect to mention the people whoſe manners we thus ridiculouſly imbibe with the moſt inſeparable diſregard. Their good qualities are in fact the only things which we ſcorn to adopt, as if it was a derogation either from our ſpirit or our underſtanding, to owe a ſingle inſtance of prudence or virtue to the force of example. France in particular, has kindly ſupplied us with an abundance of folliet; but there is not, to my recollection, any one circumſtance wherein ſhe has given the ſmalleſt improvement to our underſtanding; not that France is deficient in ſenſe, or deficient in virtue. It is we who want the wiſdom of imitating her, where ſhe is really praiſe-worthy; and are infatuated, to the lamentable degree of neglecting thoſe very ones which we ought to purſue with our higheſt admiration, to follow thoſe which ought to be the objects of our higheſt averſion and contempt.

In the preſent caſe, I mean their convivial entertainments, the French are particularly ſenſible and well bred; they are all vivacity, without running into the leaſt indelicacy, and can keep up the neceſſary life of a ſocial meeting without borrowing the ſmalleſt aſſiſtance from immorality. In the moſt elevated flow of ſpirits they never think of ſending women out of company, merely to give an unbounded looſe to ribaldry and licentiouſneſs. On the contrary, they eſtimate the pleaſure of the entertainment by the number of ladies; and look upon an evening to be moſt wretchedly trifled away where a party of men make an appointment for a tavern. Thus their politeneſs prevents them from deviating either into folly or vice; and in the moſt intimate intercourſe of families, nothing fearfully ever paſſes but a round of ſenſible freedom and unconſtrained civility.

With us, however, the caſe is widely different; if half a dozen friends meet at the houſe of a valuable acquaintance, inſtead of treating his wife, his ſiſter, or his daughter, with a proper degree of reſpect we all manifeſt an abſolute diſregard for their company; the moment the cloth is taken away we expect they ſhall retire, and look upon it as a piece of ill-breeding if they ſtay a moment longer than ordinary. And for what are we ſo much left to be left to ourſelves? Why, for the mighty ſatisfaction of drinking an obſcene toaſt, and the pleaſure of indiſcriminately filling a huſper to a woman of honour and a ſtrumpet; the friend of our boſom, and a fellow whom we conſider perhaps as the greateſt ſcoundrel in the univerſe.

In the country where the women are ſo generally remarkable for good ſenſe and delicate vivacity, where they alſo enjoy in other reſpects ſo ample ſhare of liberty, and in a manner regulate the laws of propriety, is it not a little ſurpriſing that in the moments of convivial feſtivity we ſhould treat them with ſo palpable contempt. The hour in which we ſhould be moſt happy, one would naturally imagine, ſhould be the time in which we ought moſt earneſtly to ſolicit the favour of their company? But ſo, it is impoſſible to make an Engliſhman happy without allowing him to run into the groſſeſt illiberalities. The converſation of an amiable woman he thinks by no means equal to the roar of a diſſolute companion; and it is abſolutely neceſſary to make him gloriouſly drunk, as the faſhionable phraſe is, before he can reliſh the envied pinacle of a bon vivant felicity.

The pleaſanteſt exceſs which all our choice [illegible] give for this extraordinary attach[illegible] that without a toaſt [illegible] findings [illegible]

[illegible] restaurant; we [illegible] exceſs, nor puſh the toaſt a[illegible] ſets, in plain Engliſh, "we could not indulge ourſelves in a thouſand ſcandalous exceſſes, which would diſgrace the loweſt plebiſm of the community; we could neither deſtroy our conſtitution, [illegible] neither give a looſe to obſcenity, [illegible] out ſome [illegible] names [illegible] all or even dangerous to [illegible] lives.

To remedy ſo great a diſadvantage, [illegible] cue our national character from the [illegible] and to eſtabliſh ſome [illegible] of a civilized people, there are [illegible]

Theſe however are [illegible] ſhort and effectual [illegible] to baniſh all taverns, and to all private houſes whatever to make the ladies withdraw from company. By this means, in the firſt place, there will be no emulation among giddy headed young fellows to ſwallow another bumper, nor any obligation for a man with a weak conſtitution to drink as hard as a ſeaſoned ſot-hunter; and in the ſecond inſtance, agreeable to the principles of politeneſs, will never ſwerve from the ſentiments either of reaſon or virtue; [illegible] productive of ſocial mirth [illegible] and real happineſs.

ELECTRICK FIRE,

By WILLIAM JOHNSON.

THE courſe conſiſts of two lectures, in the firſt of which all the properties of that wonderful element, as far as the lateſt diſcoveries have made us acquainted therewith, and the principal laws by which it acts are demonſtrated in a number of curious experiments, many of which are entirely new. Among many other particulars will be ſhewn that the electric fire, commonly produced by the friction of glaſs, and other electrick ſubſtances, is not created by that friction, but is a real element or fluid body diffuſed through all places in and near this earth; that our bodies contain enough of it, at all times, to ſet a houſe on fire. Alſo many errors, that have crept into this branch of natural philoſopy, will be expunged, and the true theory thereofeſtabliſhed, on the ſolid foundation of reaſon and experiment.

In the ſecond lecture this fire will be ſhewn to be real lightning, from its conſtantly and invariably producing the ſame effects as lightning does; in provin and explaining which, moſt of the effects of lightning will be imitated by the electrick fire, ſuch as killing animals, melting metals, tearing and rending bodies through which it paſſes; together with many curious experiments, naturally repreſenting the various phænomena of thunder ſtorms, accounting for their cauſes, and explaining their effects. A practical method of preſerving ourſelves, our houſes, and effects, from the deſtructive violence of lightning, will likewiſe be ſhewn; the efficacy of which will be demonſtrated by ſuch indubitable proofs, from experience, as have not hitherto been exhibited to the world.

Thoſe who deſire to have their habitations effectually guarded from the fatal violence of one of the moſt awful powers of nature, (with which this colony in particular has been often dreadfully viſited) may learn, from theſe lectures and experiments, more of the nature and properties of lightning than has been known to mankind until within theſe few years. They will, at the ſame time, have an opportunity of being fully convinced that the method propoſed for their ſecurity, if put in practice, with proper precaution, will be attended with ſucceſs; and conſequently, that, inſtead of having any juſt objection thereto, from a perſuaſion of its being preſumptuous, we have the utmoſt reaſon to bleſs GOD for a diſcovery ſo important and eminently uſeful. A prudent man foreſeeth the evil, and hideth himſelf; but the ſimple paſs on and are puniſhed. PROV. 22. 3.

As the knowledge of nature tends to enlarge the human mind, and give us more exalted ideas of the GOD of NATURE, it is preſumed that this courſe will prove to many an agreeable and rational entertainment.

The firſt courſe will be on Tueſday and Wedneſday next, and will be repeated on Thurſday and Friday following; likewiſe on the correſponding days in the three following weeks, provided the requiſite dryneſs of the air will permit.

Tickets to be had at Dillon's and Backhouſe's taverns, and at Peter Timothy's, at 40 s. for both lectures.

N. B. No perſon will be admitted without a ticket by paying at the door, as the inconvenience is great, and muſt be obvious to every one.

Said JOHNSON,

Likewiſe propoſes to exhibit a courſe of experiments (to be accompanied with an explanatory lecture) in that eminently uſeful branch of natural Philoſophy, called

MAGNETISM.

IN this courſe all the principal properties of the magnet or loadſtone will be demonſtrated in a number of curious experiments, and a rational theory of magneſm founded thereon, by which the polar direction and dip of the magnetical needle may be naturally and rationally accounted for.

The uſe and application of this moſt ſurprizing natural power to the important purpoſes of navigation will be ſhewn; the defects of the common ſea-compaſſes will be particularly conſidered and demonſtrated; and the lateſt improvements which the celebrated Dr. Knight has made in that uſeful inſtrument, by which it has attained its utmoſt degree of perfection, will be explained; the knowledge of which is of the utmoſt importance to all perſons concerned in trade and navigation.

The courſe will conſiſt of upwards of twenty experiments, amongſt which are thoſe performed by Dr. Knight before the Royal Society, with many others equally ſurprizing and inſtructive; to be performed with ſeveral natural magnets, together with large magnetical ſteel bars of a ſurprizing degree of ſtrength, which will give a touch four time ſtronger than the beſt loadſtones yet known.

The lecture to begin as ſoon as thirty perſons have ſubſcribed. Subſcriptions are taken in by the operator, at the Library room, in Union-Street, where tickets will be given out at the time of ſubſcription, at a dollar each.

4. ELIXIR of BARDANA, For the gout and rheumatiſm. This reeſtabliſhes the health after the fits of the gout, ſhortens ſuch as follow, and eaſes the pain. For the rheumatiſm it is a certain cure, and the diſeaſe never returns.

EGERTON LEIGH, J. V. A.

WHEREAS a certain libel was on the 10th day of December laſt exhibited and filed in this court by Samuel Pleaſants, and Samuel Rhodes, of the city of Philadelphia, for recovery of certain ſums of money borrowed by one William Earl of Rhode Iſland, on the bottom of certain ſloop called the induſtry, her tackle, furniture and apparel, which ſaid William Earl is ſole owner of the ſaid ſloop.

AND WHEREAS in ſupport of the actors demand an exemplification of the original bill of bottomry, from ſome public office in Philadelphia was produced, but unaccompanied with any evidence of a ſubſiſting debt, notwithſtanding the ſaid libellers did, by their libel, aver, that the debt ſued for is unſatisfied, and that no part thereof is paid, and it appearing to me that the proofs in this cauſe were inſufficient in law for me to decree a condemnation and ſale of the ſaid veſſel; I did therefore, on mature deliberation, interlocutorily order and adjudge, that the ſaid veſſel ſhould remain in the charge and cuſtody of the marſhal of this court, and that the libellers ſhall tranſmit the original bill of bottomry, or give due proof that the debt demanded is ſtill ſubſiſting and unſatisfied; and alſo, that the ſaid William Earl, the owner, ſhall have notice to come in and conteſt the Merits of the actors libel.

THESE ARE THEREFORE to cite and admoniſh the ſaid William Earl, the owner of the ſaid ſloop Induſtry, to be, and appear before me, at the uſual place of judicature, in Charles-Town, within three calendar months from the date hereof, to ſhew cauſe, (if any they have) why the ſaid veſſel ſhould not be condemned agreeable to the prayer of the actors libel
